Represent Your Industry with Regulatory and Legislative Interaction

TRSA Hill Day is your opportunity to personally engage federal regulators, lawmakers and their staff. As a business leader with unique experience, your insights are vital to improving federal officials' understanding of the linen, uniform and facility services industry and to hold them accountable for their decisions. TRSA visits to Capitol Hill will inform your elected leaders about tax, environment, labor and other issues that our industry shares with many other types of businesses. Federal representatives must emphasize these matters in their campaigns to display their dedication to keeping the economy and nation strong.

Issue Briefing/Team Building/TRSAPAC Reception

Conference participants will experience TRSA's small-group visits Thursday morning, March 28, to legislators' offices. This is your chance to sharpen your personal communication skills while generating immediate and long-term benefits to your company. Early Wednesday evening, you'll meet other members of your group to formulate strategy to convey the industry's positions to policy makers. Following this session, strategizing continues at the TRSAPAC Reception, open to current TRSAPAC donors and new ones who donate at that time (see registration form).

Network with Special Interest Groups

Committee Meetings

Connect with like-minded TRSA members who will share information and ideas on specific issues and markets during scheduled meetings. Committee participants develop educational content for conferences and programs, assist in identifying topics and authors for Textile Services magazine and are often tasked by the TRSA Board of Directors to examine issues and provide guidance to the association. This year, these committees will gather:

- Associates
- Healthcare
- Military Veterans
- Women in Textile Services
- Young Executives

For a full list of TRSA committees and task forces, visit www.trsa.org/committees. Please note other committees will meet at other times during the year.

Alliance Partner

As the linen, uniform and facility services industry's primary advocate with federal and state legislators and regulators, TRSA is coordinating a North American Textile Services Organization (NATSO) to expand on and address common issues and facilitate information-sharing within the industry. In addition, TRSA is introducing Alliance Partner pricing for laundry professionals to attend events and programs that have overarching benefit to the linen, uniform and facility services industry and would benefit from broader representation. For more information on Alliance Partner pricing, please contact Joseph Ricci at jricci@trsa.org.
